

JAMES BOND's JAMAICA

TOUR DESCRIPTION

Experience the Jamaica that inspired the Bond series. On arrival at the helipad you will be greeted with your choice of either a flute of Champagne, or a bottle of Red Stripe Beer or water to take along on the tour.

Your first point of interest will be Dolphin cove where, on the way past which, you will be able to see the dolphin in their pools. From there you will move on past the spectacular property Rio Chico, to Dunn's River Falls, the world famous attraction that is a "must see" in this area. You will then make a short hop along the coast to Laughing Waters. This short stretch of golden sand beach has a small waterfall emptying out into the Caribbean, and is recognizable as the beach where James Bond first met Honey Ryder coming out of the water in the movie Dr. No.

From there you will fly past Ocho Rios, Jamaica's second largest resort area. On your left you will get your first aerial view of Reynolds Pier, also known as James Bond Pier, which will be very recognizable to 007 Fans as "Crab Key," Dr. No's evil island lair. From there you will be afforded magnificent views on your way to fly over the historic Prospect Plantation and see the original Great House on the hill with its spectacular view of the Caribbean. Next is historic Rio Nuevo battlefield, where the British first landed in Jamaica and clashed with the Spanish in 1655.

It's then onwards to Oracabessa and a view Goldeneye, Ian Fleming's home. This is perched on the cliff top overlooking the Caribbean and is where he was inspired to write the Bond books. Beside Goldeneye is the outer bank Island with James Bond Beach, which was also one of the locations used as Crab Key.

The return trip is along the spectacular northern coastline and culminates on arrival back at the helipad where you will get one last look at "Dr No's Lair". This view from the ocean side is the most recognizable angle as Bond leaving Crab Key by boat was one of the last scenes in Dr. No.
